THE LATE FORMER PRESIDENT CORONADO "Cory" Aquino was a plant lover.

She also readily accepted our invitation to be the guest of honor at the exhibit of the Philippine Orchid Society, Philippine House Society and Philippine Horticultural Society—an expression of our support for the development of an eco-friendly environment.

During the visit of the President of Spila, who is also a plant lover and house mother, she gifted her with house plants.

Just Maymay Aquino said that her mother's prized house plants would be relocated to the Aquino residence in Talisay. After her father's death, President Aquino became a constant gardener.

Chiong said she would start by questioning the authority of Agnes Deransiers, the acting justice secretary and convict solicitor general, in approving the convict's transfer to a Spanish prison based on the EU-Spain Transfer of Sentenced Persons Agreement.

Deransiers had told the Inquirer that the transfer of 30-year-old Larrañaga, a great-grandson of the late President Sergio Osmeña Sr. and a Spanish citizen by virtue of his father, would only be "a matter of time."

Chiong, who learned of the matter only when the Inquirer reached her for comment on Friday night, had said she was very angry but believed that she

Governors' impatience led to endorsement of Gibo-Benhur

By Michael Lim Ubac
and TJ Bugarin

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO may "blame" by the news that 49 governors have endorsed the presidential candidacy of Defense Secretary Gilbert Teodoro.

The move by a group of governors to endorse the presidential candidacy of Defense Secretary Gilbert Teodoro shows that members of the administration coalition are getting impatient for the ruling Lakas-Keppas-CMD to choose a presidential standard-bearer for 2010, according to Manila-based Mano Benhur Abalos.

Abalos, the president of the League of Cities of the Philippines, yesterday joined the clamor within the ruling coalition to decide whether Teodoro or Vice President Noli de Guzman should be the administration presidential candidate.

"We might be running out of time. Look at the clock," said Abalos, pointing out that he's 30, the deadline for the filing of candidacy certificates, is "right close."

"We should decide now," said Abalos, addressing his call to President Arroyo, chair of the ruling Lakas-Keppas-CMD, and the party national directorate composed of cabinet members and regional lawmakers.

How Che's dream life turned into nightmare

By Nancy C. Canajal

LIFE-INTING A DREAM

This was how Rachel "Che" Tiongson, 27, described her early years with Deputy National Security Adviser Luis "Chino" Singson, 66.

"I was 13, a provincial kid, timid, scared and loved by a powerful and rich man who showed [me] with material gifts and promised everything—'it's every girl's dream,'" Tiongson told the Inquirer on Friday evening.

But after 17 years of being together, she said, "if being his and safe means losing this love, I'll leave him, then I'll gladly go back to a simple life."

Tiongson recently filed a criminal complaint against Singson, her former lover's parent, of harassment on Aug. 22.

"I am not afraid to lose all these material things... I came from a simple family. I can always go back to it without regrets in exchange for freedom and peace of mind," she said during an interview in a restaurant in Quezon City.

Tiongson and she thought the money abroad, the travels and the lifestyle, the attention and respect she would have from him.

"In the beginning, we were happy and so much in love. He was very generous and loving. I thought it would always be that way," she said.

"I intensely loved him. I was fiercely loyal, faithful and waited on him hand and foot. I prepared his meals, made sure his needs were met and I made him happy. It was a hands-on work."

Tiongson has five children with Singson, aged 18, 13, 11, 9 and 6.

Despite all her efforts to make the union work, rumors of his womanizing never ceased.

"I was at his bed and call, I obeyed him. I respected him. I

Gordon:
Make
tourism law work

ALL THINGS BEING
in Philippine tourism
—big and small—have a vital role to play in the growth and development of the industry, according to Sen. Richard Gordon, a tourist advocate.

In a speech delivered recently in a panel agreed, Gordon stressed that "the processes and tourism authorities must work hand-in-hand to make the Tourism Act (2009) effective."

"With faithful implementation of the law, the sector can have a better future, one to regulate and promote tourism and ensure the industry remains necessary to make our country
the world-class," he said.

Gordon said the National Association of Independent Travel Agencies (NATA) should be included in discussions of tourism issues as the largest group of travel agents (over an estimated 100 in Philippines) in the country.

NATA helped draft the tourism law and also opened a project to register local tour operators in addition to the "tourism law," which would have placed the Philippines as the world tourism center.

Gordon urged all stakeholders to take an active role in crafting the tourism law, "implementing it and regulating it."

"All of you in the tourism industry must work together and draft an RTO. On the provision and look for potential negative impact and create tourism parking. You have to coordinate the industry," he said.

PCSO guns for Guinness with biggest mission

By John M. Alvarez

THE PHILIPPINE CHARITY
Societies Office (PCSO) hopes to set a Guinness record today for the biggest ever charity medical mission in the world.
Dubbed "100 Hearts in One Day," the PCSO will mobilize 100,000 doctors, nurses and other health care volunteers to provide medical and dental assistance to some two million patients in 100 countries in 100 hours.

The huge medical mission, which is part of the PCSO's 75th anniversary celebration on Sept. 8, will be conducted in partnership with volunteers from the Catholic-based charity program, Caritas.

"This is a first of its kind project that provides free access to medical and dental care from PCSO and its partners in 100 Philippines all over the country in one day," said general manager Benigno Aguirre.

"This event is long, but it has a lot of meaning for the children and the elderly in the poorest medical mission ever conducted in the world," added assistant general manager Roderic Aguirre.
Each medical mission site will be staffed by four doctors, two dentists, four nurses and two pharmacists, to be assisted by 50 to 100 volunteers, Aguirre said.

Each site will be able to receive 1,000 to 1,500 patients, to which of the more than 2,000 medical facilities there, more than 100 will be located in various Metro Manila sites and will be staffed by volunteers from across Cebu disaster relief with Caritas.
Aguirre explained that with free general checkups and minor surgical, dental and eye treatments, heart care and ear therapies.
Volunteers will distribute medicine such as antibiotics, antepartum and postpartum, prenatal and postnatal care.

Aguirre said they had been preparing for this project for at least a year.

Aside from the medical mission, the PCSO said it would open two new facilities where people can read the profiles of patients with long-term health and chronic diseases from PCSO.
The first mission area consists of the following: regional location of the project, name of patient, complete address, blood and urine test results, the patient's background, the PCSO mission should be sent to 02-7275 for free-text and 02-7275 for free-text users. There will be a list of the patients medical and dental records, the PCSO mission will give away P75 million in the past year to medical mission operations across the country.

Most people can't live without a cell phone respondents pulled out in 11 countries and they take their phones with them everywhere, with Russians and Singaporeans the most attached.

Since that a study also said they couldn't live without their phone, topped by Taiwanese and again Singaporeans, while one in four would find it harder to replace the mobile than their pants.

Some two-thirds of respondents go to bed with their phones nearby and can't switch them off, even though they want to, because they're afraid they'll miss something.

Connection to our lives

Mobiles give us safety, security and instant access to information. They are the No. 1 need of communication for us, consistent even surpassing face-to-face communication.

But they are our extension to our lives. Jimmy Choo, Singapore's managing director of B. Thores, said in a statement.

Mobiles have also changed the nature of relationships, with the survey finding they come to look at all respondents. But using SMS (short message service), a 60th as up from 2005 also via text and about the same number and a lower reliance through a text message.

Agree from the obvious talking and texting, the top three features people use regularly on their mobile phones are the camera, clock, the calendar and the games.

As in-one device

As for e-mail and Internet access, 17 percent of respondents said they check their e-mails on and the Web on their phones, but by those in the United States and Britain.

One in 30 respondents log onto social networking websites such as Facebook and MySpace regularly via mobile, again led by Britain and the United States.

"As the mobile becomes more and more an all-in-one device, many other functions are facing challenging times. The opportunities for mobile manufacturers and service providers are enormous," said Singapore's global head of mobile, Robert Gorman.

Not everyone is tech savvy, however, as 37 percent of respondents said they don't know how to use all the functions on their phones.

The Singapore mobile phone survey was conducted online in June this year in Canada, Germany, France, Indonesia, the Netherlands, the Philippines, Russia, Singapore, Taiwan, Britain and the United States.

Significance of Magna Carta of Women

AS HUNDREDS OF WOMEN ACTIVISTS AND ADVOCATES begin to draft proposals for the implementing rules of the recently signed Republic Act No. 9710 or the Magna Carta of Women, Talk of the Town asked women leaders why the new law is an important achievement.

The Magna Carta translates into law the spirit and letter of the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and recognizes the rights and freedoms of all women, particularly the marginalized.

The UN CEDAW was ratified in 1981 by at least 60 countries, including the Philippines. It became known as the International Bill of Rights for Women.

True freedom has to be won

By Eleanor C. Gardo

WHEN I TALK TO A GROUP of women about human rights, I start by asking the women about their lives and situation. Indigeneous women would share about their being deprived of their ancestral lands, their displacement from their community because of a mining project, or about violence they experienced that they could not tell their family about.

Indigenous women would share that they do not want the lands they have, so that they could hardly do a living from farming because of low prices for their produce or high costs of inputs in raising and raising the livestock at the end of a hard season.

Philippine women workers I met in Korea would share how they cannot report abuses of their employers because of threats of being terminated and sent back to the Philippines. These are some of the stories of abuse, displacement or discrimination that Filipino women have to tell.

The Magna Carta of Women (MCW) affirms that women are holders of and claimants to human rights. It clearly places on government shoulders the duty to ensure that the human rights of women are upheld and promoted. The three branches of government at all levels and government-owned and -controlled corporations assume these obligations as well as the MCW.

MCW's rights advocates must bring about and take advantage of positive advances in national building and ensure the inclusion of women in the institutional arena to support an advocacy and/or strategy.

Under the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), governments that have ratified the treaty like the Philippines have the obligation to eliminate discrimination against women and to take steps to ensure that women, regardless of their race, condition or situation, have the opportunity to exercise and enjoy their rights.

Consistent with the trend the MCW requires that government consider the specific rights and particular concerns of women in its formulation of laws, policies, programs and projects.

The MCW is a major impetus to a model for adopting the CEDAW norms on equality and nondiscrimination in a consistent legislation. Women may have greater access to legal remedy because of the prohibition and definition of discrimination that the MCW provides. Human rights defenders may find additional legal basis in the law to demand accountability and end impunity for violations of human rights that many women continue to experience.

Advancing the push of the MCW to an anti-discrimination program, the women's rights advocates should remain vigilant that the Magna Carta is implemented in accordance with the vision of the law. True freedom has to be won.

Eleanor C. Gardo, founding co-director of the Women's Legal Resource and a longtime women's rights activist, is known for her work rights in the CEDAW and human rights.

Infidelity, violence, etc.

• The United World Table has reported gender discrepancy in terms of infidelity. It was only in 2007 that 100 percent of men were found to be infidelitous.

• The Code of Muslim Personal Laws allows polygamy, and early and arranged marriages. Muslim men are given only 30 percent of the inheritance of a male heir.

• Twenty percent of Filipinos consider that there is domestic violence in their country.

• The United Nations estimated that 50 percent of 50-year-old women have experienced sexual abuse.

• Roughly 11 percent of Philippine men have been victims of robbery.

• 102 out of every 100,000 Filipinos commit suicide.

• 27,000 died from childhood or pregnancy-related complications. The target level for 2015 is 32.2 per 100,000.

• Maternal and under-five children's deaths are highest among women with little or no education.

• Thirty-three percent of 15-year-olds are working. Women over 30 years old, who passed their reproductive years, are 23.2 percent working.

• Only 17.8 percent of the members of the House of Representatives and 36.7 percent of the members of the Senate are women.

• Less than 10 percent of full-time employees are women in the informal and emerging segments of all economic sectors.

100,000 volunteers.
2,000 medical mission sites.

On September 6, 2009, a Sunday, more than 100,000 doctors, dentists, nurses, pharmacists, health workers, medical professionals and concerned Filipino citizens from the government and private sector leave the comforts of their homes to perform the biggest act of charity in the country, to be.

These Good Samaritans, in a massive display of collective volunteerism, offer their services for free as part of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO)'s nationwide medical, dental and dental services to more than two million Filipinos—all in a single day.

Dubbed as the "100 Percent One Day" project, the PCSO's nationwide medical, dental and information-based mission aims to cover all of the country's 41,985 barangays.

"This is a first-of-its-kind project in the Philippines that provides fast access to medical and charity care from PCSO and its partners to poor Filipinos all over the country in one day," explains PCSO General Manager and Vice Chair Rosalia Uribe.

The project is envisioned to be both a celebration of the 75th Anniversary of PCSO, and a window for marginalized Filipinos from all over the country to access medical care and organized charity assistance.

For the medical and dental missions, the PCSO expects to cover 35,190 barangays in Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao, representing 80 percent of the total number of barangays in the country.

There are more than 2,000 medical mission sites to be set up all over the country on September 6, each site capable of providing service to 1,000 to 1,500 patients.

A medical mission site is manned by four doctors, two dentists, four nurses and two pharmacists. These health professionals are assisted by 30 to 40 volunteers who are in-charge of physical setup and crowd control.

Apart from general checkups and minor surgeries, eye examinations, bone scan and ear check monitor will be available in selected medical mission sites located in government hospitals and rural clinics.

Medicines to be distributed free to patients at the sites include amoxicillin drops, capsules and suspensions; methoprolol tablets; metformin; acid; paracetamol drops and tablets; and ascorbic drops, tablets and syrups.

"PCSO has been diligently medicated dental missions for several years now," says Uribe. "But this is the first time we'll hold it in larger scale in one day, targeting more than two million patients."

In Metro Manila alone, more than 150,000 beneficiaries are expected to avail of free medical and dental services offered to some 100 mission sites spread throughout the National Capital Region.

The medical sites in Metro Manila are manned by volunteers from the seven Catholic dioceses affiliated with Caritas, which mobilized lay leaders and church workers to assist the health professionals in the medical mission sites.

The information-based mission, on the other hand, is expected to cover 100 percent of the 41,985 barangays.

Under this component, barangay health workers and residents are encouraged to send to the PCSO through Short Messaging System (SMS) or text message the name and profile of a patient in their community who intends to seek financial assistance from the charity agency.

This would allow the PCSO to maintain a database of prospective beneficiaries whose cases would have to be evaluated to determine who may qualify for the medical assistance.

The feeding mission would be conducted in selected barangays, mostly in depressed areas, in coordination with church-based groups and civic organizations.

The "One Hundred Percent in One Day" project, according to Uribe, is envisioned to be an annual activity that will serve as a vehicle for spreading the "charity virus" and make organized and systematic sharing coupled with volunteerism as a way of life for Filipinos.

Indigent patients in need of medical assistance from PCSO may send their messages to 392-7676 (for Smart users) and 0939-4095001 (for non-Smart users) during the info-based mission on September 6, 2009. Messages are accepted from 12:01 a.m. to 11:59 p.m. only. Last type NAME (space) ADDRESS (space) ILLNESS (space) CONTACT NUMBER OF PATIENT. All messages will be relayed to the PCSO for documentation and evaluation. Priority will be given to patients in dire need of medical assistance.

Healing kids' war wounds

By Ryan D. Rosales

Colombo, Philippines

THE COLORFUL PICTURE sketched with crayons on a sheet of paper seems to depict a perfect morning, but up close, the scene is apolitical by images of Mao's rebels, a school building aflame, a burnt police car and a bright sun shedding tears.

The classroom had long been the mind of 11th Ave. Alcala, a pupil of the Robinson General Elementary School (RGES) in Kalamang, Lanao del Norte, some 200 meters from the town center. (RGES) students attended his work and stayed in night house in Aug. 30, 2009.

Because people were killed, a police car was burned, and a house was destroyed. After the attack, the school was leveled.

The school principal had served as the school's command center. He had led in battles to the townships, they took some pupils to townships and used them as human shields.

Because of the school principal, the school principal, and a number of the pupils still had in complete silence the trauma, especially those who had witnessed the atrocities and had been involved in danger.

For four days last month, some 150 RGES pupils from Grade 1 to 6 underwent a series of activities designed to help cope with the psychological wounds inflicted by last year's war episode. The daily sessions lasted for 45 minutes, on one class period.

Building "Reinforcing the Past, A Journey to Healing," the program quickly captured the attention of the children.

"It's an effective method for the children.

in poor men when they would like to express in connection with their individual experiences," said Rosales, a member of the Robinson General Elementary School of the Department of Education (DepEd) in Lanao del Norte.

The pupils were asked to prepare two drawings—one posted in the "Gallery of the Past," which depicts their experiences from the war, and the other in the "Gallery of the Future," which outlines their hopes.

Realization

One striking image in an ongoing television coverage of a survey study of National where the underlying issue-center is found. It is discernible only from the sea, which suggests that the child could have been swimming by boat across the Pangasinan Bay.

A number of drawings show scenes of tragedy and grief. Rich (left), a Grade 4 pupil, sketched a girl and a boy held together, a dead boy and a baby killed by a rifle.

Isabelle (left), a Grade 1 pupil, illustrated an unidentifiable scene, which could be the one that killed Anna, a Grade 1 pupil.

Several drawings show people playing in their homes or fighting against enemies. One had the line "Prayer delivers all."

But a few were images of education, the road to a better future. What would one see a picture of people living in a house with two children, having school.

Hopes

After the attack, it was fairly easy to report what the children are hoping for from their teachers and parents. There are those who are happy and happy. There are those who are happy and happy.

A Grade 4 pupil, Isabella Lomanto, drew her family together.

Case vs Lim on China travel mulled

By Tim S. Santos

A LAWYER IS MULLING OVER the filing of a complaint with the Office of the Ombudsman against Manila Mayor Alfredo Lim over the recent China trip undertaken by some 700 barangay chairs using public funds.

Against Lim, officials of the city's Liga ng mga Barangay, which organized the trip, could also be held liable, said lawyer MacDula Caliguan.

Caliguan criticized the local government "excessive spending," saying it was a clear misuse of public funds.

He cited the city government's policy against holding of seminars outside Manila which Lim reportedly issued last year.

"According to the policy instruction, the holding of seminars and lectures in far-flung areas are discouraged due to doubtful its revenue collection and budgetary concerns," Caliguan said. "But this was utterly disregarded by Mayor Lim when he allowed the foreign travel of the barangay captains."

He said Lim and the leadership of the Liga ng mga Barangay have exposed themselves to possible criminal and administrative suit before the Office of the Ombudsman should the policy instruction.

"It must be satisfactorily explained to the public the purpose of such trip because public funds were used," he said.

Lim has already issued a statement saying he was mulling suing with due diligence that no city fund was used for it.

But Joel Pao, director of Liga and chair of Barangay 339 Zone 03 in Pandacan, had admitted that the money used for the trip came from the barangays' annual contributions to the league.

"After having been apprised that no city funds will be touched and the chairman will be rendering service while on leave of absence, I consented on objection and signed the recommendation for the issuance of travel authority," Lim said.

Recommendatory

Lim said the fact that his role was merely recommendatory while the final approval came with the Department of Interior and Local Government, which ultimately allowed the chairman to travel.

"But, just the same, I will be asking the officials of the league if the trip was worthwhile by means of a report on what they have learned from the activity," he said, adding that the trip was intended for the chairman to learn and share experiences and insights with their counterparts in other regions.

"Seeing personally the fruits of the development in education in various towns, social infrastructure, environmental management, and the improvement in the lives of their people will give our local officials the insights on how they can manage the same development in their respective jurisdiction," Lim stressed.

New Medicine For the Modern Age

Phytomedicines - while the term has been gaining momentum in mainstream consciousness, few could actually give a definition if asked; given this, few recognize the value that this new buzzword presents.

Its prefix already gives a clue to its nature. The word phytos originates from the Greek word phytis, meaning plant. Phytomedicines are defined as therapeutic agents derived from plants, parts of plants or the preparations made from them; the traditional use and effectiveness of which has been backed up by pharmacological experiments, clinical studies and practitioners' experience.

"I strongly encourage the public and health practitioners to open-mindedly evaluate the therapeutic potential of various phytomedicines available in the market today," urges adds Dr. Eliseo T. Banayral, Pascual Laboratories' Medical Director. "Phytomedicines are anchored on the wisdom of ancient healing traditions and are valued in the traditional sense as much as they are appreciated for their therapeutic value."

In Europe, in fact, phytomedicines are often prescribed or recommended by physicians and are usually available at pharmacies, not just in health and natural product shops. Phytomedicines in Germany are already considered as ethical drugs, prescribed by doctors and dispensed at drug-stores.

The support of modern clinical studies paved the way for the use of phytomedicines to steadily rise in the world. As phytomedicines continue to define its impact in the medical industry, it's important to validate its efficacy to ensure that it is taken to the next level.

"Few realize just how stringent the testing process of local phytomedicines is," adds Dr. Banayral. "We, pioneers of phytomedicinal products in the market have to undergo its safety and efficacy and therefore ensure that it goes through the same screening procedures and clinical trials required of conventional synthetic drugs. Even traditional folkloric data shows that the use of medicinal plant-based products make it a safer option for long-term use."

This statement rings true for one of the most popular phytomedicine brands available in the Philippines today: ASCOF®.

"You'll be surprised at how effective it is and how quickly you can feel the effects," attests Seta Lim, a long-time user of ASCOF. "The fact that it's organic and made by a reputable pharmaceutical company also makes it a safer option for me."

In the same way that phytomedicines are recognized both for their folkloric and scientific qualities, ASCOF is known for the healing properties that Lagundi offers.

It's therefore natural that the brand ASCOF has already become synonymous to the quality and therapeutic properties of the plant it is derived from, the Lagundi leaf.

"I'm confident to recommend it to friends and family," enthuses Lim. "Everyone talks about how fast and safe phytomedicines are, but ASCOF is something I have tried. I have first-hand experience about how quick and safe it really is."

Even conventional folkloric data shows that the use of medicinal plant-based products make it a safer option for long-term use.

The Greening of Modern Medicine

Plants have always been central to traditional medicinal practice but fusing science with the benefits of natural remedies today has paved the way for various herbs to become known as the source for some of the most effective drugs, now known as phytomedicines.

In the Philippines, the leading proponent of phytomedicines is backed by a company with a 60-year track record in the pharmaceutical field, - Pascual Laboratories - who introduced to the country an organic and all-natural cough and asthma remedy, ASCOF.

ASCOF, now available in syrup, tablet and capsule forms, is derived from the Lagundi plant (scientifically known as Viburnum Negundo L.), a large branched shrub which has gained wide acceptance. Through clinical trials conducted by reputable medical institutions, this Department of Health (DOH) endorsed natural herb was introduced as an effective anti-asthma and cough remedy.

ASCOF is the first licensed herbal medicine from the Philippine Council for Health Research and Development, an agency of the Department of Science and Technology. It also earned for the Philippines recognition from the International Exhibition of Inventions, New Technologies and Products in Geneva, Switzerland.

"ASCOF has the distinction of being an all-natural product, 100% organically nurtured in a quality certified farm untainted by synthetic chemical fertilizers and pesticides," says Jericho Bayona, Pascual Laboratories' Senior Brand Manager for Phytomedicines. "It's safe, has no side-effects and no risk of overdose."

A product borne out of more than two decades of research and analysis by top institutions, ASCOF actually goes through the same stringent screening processes as synthetic medicines and has been clinically-proven for pediatric and adult applications based on various clinical trials.

With phytomedicine's credibility rising in the country, it's no surprise that physicians and pharmacists trust the brand ASCOF most. Anchored on the traditional efficacy of the Lagundi plant, ASCOF embodies this traditional healing properties with sound scientific foundation, anchored on a well-recognized heritage of quality assurance in the pharmaceutical industry, which Pascual Laboratories is known for.

"There is a reason why ASCOF is synonymous to the safe and effective healing effects Lagundi is known for," ends Dr. Eliseo T. Banayral, Pascual Laboratories' Medical Director. "We take pride in our understanding of phytomedicines and the attention we put into the quality and safety of our products, because this is the very reason behind ASCOF's credibility, not only among the public, but the medical community."

PHYTMEDICINES are defined as therapeutic agents derived from plants, parts of plants or the preparations made from them. And, known for the healing properties that Lagundi offers and the synergistic clinical efficacy that was done through the help of science.

ORGANIC Lagundi farm. Pioneers of phytomedicinal products in the market have to underscore its safety and efficacy and ensure it goes through the same screening procedures and clinical trials required of conventional synthetic drugs.

A lifetime of travels with Jon Santos

By Cafe Ignacio

THIS SUBDIVISION HAS SO many layers! That was the thought when I let my head on the roof of the car.

It was the first time Jon Santos traveled to his home in Ayala Alabang, sometime during his early days of acquaintance at UP Diliman, in the late 1970s and '80s.

Jon's Alabang was unlike the view of my childhood. In Singapore, a sudden bang inside your vehicle only meant you ran over a kid.

Our apartment was the color of striped trousers near vintage blue modded up like the main shade of Quinsy Sogoyon. The area was so relatively modern that the police installed a regular roadside agent to spy on druggies. The problem was that his "power" of warning, however, was not enough and, properly, he did not stick up crime crews, and had to chase away kids attempting to buy Hooters, everyone was in on the dispute, except him.

Jon took to Singapore like it was a theme

Some two-price houses in the city just with a lot of other people's houses, we had our first meeting there through my introduction, meeting down stairs in a hotel, and found a way to rooftop chandeliers, the occasional hint of romantic waiting. AFTER AGGRESSIVELY MAKING ITS mark in cutting-edge mobile phones and home-theater-like LCD television, it now has the largest LCD TV market share in Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Vietnam, the Philippines and Singapore, according to market research firm GfK. Samsung is moving up its periodical product launch schedule; it hopes would equal its local best friend, Global Vision.

Launched three weeks ago in Bangkok was the Samsung Z View ST330, the first in a new line of Samsung Digital cameras that, in the words of Arong Wook Noh, vice president of Samsung Digital Imaging Co., are "not just cameras, but intelligent image management and storage accessories."

"The CT3300 will change your photographic experience," promised Samsung Asia president and CEO Yoon-Ho Na. During the dinner that followed the unveiling of the camera in the Cresta Grand in Seoul, Korea.

Instead, the fixed LCD screen flashes a countdown timer, giving a steady grip on how much time users have left before snapping a photo.

■ Children's Mode: Shooting babies is usually a case of parents, rushing around to get that perfect upright snuggle. The K7200 makes things easier with the Children Mode, to which an automatic close-up appears on the four LCD screens to help the baby focus and break into a smile.

◆ Teach Next. Again, a feature present in most digital cameras, but improved in the Zooming EVOX. Once the subject studies, the camera automatically directs the movement and slides on its own. An added feature is Think I've Done It, which programs the camera to shoot only when the subject has his or her eyes closed.
